

Representative Legal Matters

Jim Holloway

- Represented a well-known food and beverage company in a lawsuit involving the unauthorized sale of cannabis products in packaging that mimicked the look of that company's well known confectionery products.
- Represented a well-known vaping company in a lawsuit involving the unauthorized sale of noncompliant cannabis products in association with confusingly similar trademarks and trade dress, and infringing designs.
- Represented one of the world's leading fast-moving consumer goods companies in a dispute involving the alleged use of a confusingly similar trademark in association with compliant cannabis products.
- Represented one of the world's leading videoconferencing companies during the COVID-19 pandemic in a lawsuit alleging the infringement of a Canadian media company's trademarks.
- Represented a leading retail store chain in a lawsuit involving the sale of android set-top devices wrongly alleged to be designed and used for the purposes of copyright infringement.
- Represented the manufacturer of devices used for the purposes of mineral exploration in an international commercial arbitration with its former North American distributor.
- Represented a leading financial services company in a copyright infringement lawsuit alleging the unauthorized licensing and use of fintech software.
- Represented a Chinese mining company in a lawsuit alleging the misuse of confidential information in furtherance of making a very large investment in a publicly traded Canadian mining company.
- Represented a Canadian company importing and selling Persian food products in a lawsuit against competitors selling look-alike products, including products displaying infringing trademarks.
- Represented a multinational food company in a lawsuit arising from a third party's importation and sale of unauthorized grey market confectionery products.
- Represented a California-based computer company in several lawsuits arising from the importation and sale of counterfeit products in and from the Canadian market.
- Represented a US-based multinational courier company in a trademark infringement lawsuit against a third party which was misusing the company's well-known trademarks.

Baker McKenzie.

- Represented a company in the oil and gas industry in a Federal Court patent infringement action relating to certain wellbore technology.
- Represented a company in the oil and gas industry in a Federal Court lawsuit arising from the infringement of certain proprietary and copyrighted software.
- Represented a leading advertising agency in a lawsuit involving allegations of misappropriation of personality in a television commercial featuring a likeness of an Olympic athlete.
- Represented a global confectionery company in a trade dress lawsuit arising from a major competitor's adoption of confusingly similar product packaging.
- Represented an Asian electronics company in Canadian class actions involving allegations of price fixing.
- Represented a US electronics company in several lawsuits involving the importation and sale of products that infringed its trademarks, trade dress and industrial designs.
- Represented a US-based sporting goods company in lawsuits relating to the importation and sale of counterfeit products in Canada.
- Represented a Japanese computer hardware company in a class action lawsuit alleging negligent product design.
- Represented a UK-based bank in a lawsuit alleging negligence around the release of deposits to a fraudster.
- Represented a leading California-based hardware company in asserting trademark infringement claims and obtaining Anton Piller orders against companies found to be selling infringing and counterfeit hardware.
- Advised an online music provider on issues relating to business risks in the face of legislative change, including intermediary liability issues.
- Regularly advise leading social media companies on issues relating to product development, product compliance, and copyright issues.
- Regularly advise local and multinational companies in the food and beverage industry on issues relating to the development, protection and enforcement of their trademarks and copyrights, including on disputes relating to infringing and look-alike products.